To Whom It May Concern:

I am a senior at XXXXX High School in XXXXX, Virginia. As a future teacher, I was very excited to see the Educators Rising Competition category entitled Job Interview. I am intrigued by the real world experience this gives me, and the preparation I will gain from this when I graduate from college. I feel as if I am the perfect candidate for this job.

I have taken Virginia Teachers for Tomorrow I and II. I have learned about IEPs, Special Education Programs and Laws, inclusion classrooms, and the role of student teachers. I have had first hand experience in the classroom, interning with first and fourth grade students. This gives me a unique teaching approach, as I know how to work with kids of different age levels and different learning abilities. I have created and taught several lesson plans, and have an online portfolio dedicated to my teaching journey that I update every week. Most importantly, I have a passion and love for children. Fueling them with love and knowledge is a feeling of joy that no words can explain.

I am also a great leader, as I have taken on many leadership roles in my high school career. I am the Student Council Association President this year, and I was the Student Council Association Secretary last year. I have been on the XXX Leadership Workshop Staff both last year and this year. I am the captain of the Varsity Soccer Team at my school and I am also a member of the National Honor Society. These leadership roles have taught me not only how to become a better student, but also a better teacher in the future. Leading a group of rambunctious elementary schoolers can be tough, but with my leadership experience, I welcome this challenge.

Thank you for considering me for this position. Please contact me if you have further questions.

Sincerely,

Antia Goodgrade
